DIRECTORY OF INSTITUTIONS ENGAGED IN RESEARCH
ON THE CULTURAL DIMENSION OF DEVELOPMENT

PREFACE

'... in its widest sense, culture may now be said to be the whole complex of distinctive spiritual, material, intellectual and emotional features that characterize a society or social group. It includes not only the arts and letters, but also modes of life, the fundamental rights of the human being, value systems, traditions and beliefs ...

... Balanced development can only be ensured by making cultural factors an integral part of the strategies designed to achieve it, consequently, these strategies should always be devised in the light of the historical, social and cultural context of each society ...'

Mexico City Declaration on Cultural Policies
6 August 1982

In the spirit of this Declaration of Unesco, some 650 questionnaires were sent to centres and institutions throughout the world which we felt might be sufficiently interested in this aspect of the cultural dimension of development to undertake research in the field. This Directory, the first of its kind and therefore by no means complete, was elaborated on the basis of the replies received. From the information collected, it was clear that most of the institutions replying to the questionnaire take into account the cultural dimension of development in their research and activities, even if, a priori, it is not their main objective. We have attempted to include in this Directory the most pertinent information for each institution, even though it has not always been easy to discern to what extent the cultural dimension of development has been taken into account in every study or research activity. Moreover, the replies indicate that there exists a wide variety of interpretations of the very concept of the cultural dimension of development. A further edition of this Directory would perhaps allow for the elaboration of these aspects.

The question remains: what should a directory contain? Must it be very concise, or, on the contrary, should it be as detailed as possible? This dilemma is also apparent when analysing the replies to the questionnaire. However, this Directory provides all the information necessary for direct correspondence with the institutions listed. As a complementary working tool, we can recommend the excellent bibliography by Mrs Luce Kellermann on the cultural dimension of development which will be updated in the near future.

The institutions included in this Directory are listed in alphabetical order. In Annex, the same institutions are grouped by country, with the international organizations recognized as such by Unesco listed apart. An alphabetical index contains all the names, the acronyms where they exist, and the abbreviations.

We hope that this Directory will prove a useful tool for researchers on the cultural dimension of development.

RESEARCH

As a development agency, CDB is interested in the total development of its borrowing member countries. The purpose of CDB, as set out in Article 1 of the Agreement Establishing the Bank, is 'to contribute to the harmonious economic growth and development of the member countries in the Caribbean and to promote economic cooperation and integration among them, having special and urgent regard to the needs of the less developed members of the region.'

Its focus, in keeping with its Charter and within the limits of its financial and manpower resources, has been on areas which, while not directly cultural, assist in creating an environment much more conducive to cultural development, the latter being pursued under financing and direct promotion by agencies which have the relevant financial resources and expertise.

Since 1979, CDB, in association with the United States Agency for International Development, has been involved in a Basic Needs Programme through which financing has been allocated to some of its Caribbean member countries towards schools, community centres, health clinics, libraries and other social infrastructure and rural community development.

TYPE public, non-profit

MAIN FIELDS Management of Global Common & Interdependence / Negotiation and Governance / NGO's/ Programmes

TRAINING of decision-makers. A group should represent the spectrum of international partners (developed & developing countries, private & public, academics, trade-unions etc. Programmes from 5 days to 6 weeks

WORKING LANGUAGES English

RESEARCH

All activities are based upon preliminary research, the result of which serves to prepare the programmes per se as well as furnish documentation.

1. Governance and Interdependence programmes: research is oriented to the preparation of case studies and simulation exercises. Example: "Negotiation among Zimbabwean authorities and a Swiss Company, a hotel investment agreement" Particular attention is paid to the cross-cultural aspect of these negotiations.

2. Non-Governmental Organization Programmes analyze the movement of pressure groups and offers an overview of their positions and plans of action in a given issue.

3. Global Common Programmes: research on security and disarmament.

The approach to the issues is an interdisciplinary one, therefore characterized by a network of interactions, where cultural values are considered as core to any possible development of new approaches to solving problems.

The research and professional programmes combine micro- and macro-economic, social, cultural and political dimensions of issues, so as to allow an appraisal of the interdependence of these levels of analysis.

The 2 programmes under this department of the Chr. Michelsen Institute do not carry out research that specifically deals with the cultural factors of development. But development research is carried out by a multi-disciplinary team of researchers, and studies of human rights in developing countries inevitably deal with cultural aspects. The cultural dimension of development is often taken into consideration, although interactions with culture are not specifically studied

RESEARCH

Project: "Economic Aspects of Human Development", directed by Dr. Oscar Nudler. Research project sponsored by the United Nations University and carried out through a network of scholars working at research institutes in Latin America, Asia, Europe and the United States. Three main areas, integrating theoretical, methodological and case study dimensions:

1. Comparative study and assessment of selected cases of 'alternative' economic development at national and local level
2. Comparative study of the relation between development models, economy and culture in various countries and regions, e.g.: a comparative study of the economic development processes and their link with the cultural background in the cases of Argentina and Brazil
3. Study of the foundations of economics from an interdisciplinary perspective

A series of 5 volumes has been published on this project in English and Spanish.

So far no specific programmes of research on the cultural dimension of development have been developed. Some studies, however, have been undertaken by PAID staff which to some extent did consider some cultural aspects of development, e.g.:

- Stratégies Paysannes dans un projet de développement (Colloque de Ouagadougou organized by ORSTOM 1979), by C. Dikoume and Cordeiro
- Développement des sociétés rurales et autopromotion paysanne en zone Soudano-Sahélienne, cas du Yatenga au Burkina-Faso, by A.B. Dabire and S. Diello, 1985
- Socio-cultural constraints in communicating agricultural techniques and innovation to small farmers (Central Province of Zambia), PAID/ESA, Kabwe (on-going studies)
- Actions concrètes de développement endogène dans les domaines de compétence de l'UNESCO (for UNESCO by IPD, Secretariat General, January, 1987)
- Mouanko: Etude socio-économique générale en vue du développement, Douala, IPD, 1971, by Dikoume and Luetke-Entrup
- Projet d'aménagement intégré du massif du Fouta-Djalon (République Populaire Révolutionnaire de Guinée): identification des facteurs humains, Douala, IPD, 1981 (Mission conjointe OUA/PNUE/UNSO/FAO/UNESCO)
- Le développement rural en Afrique au sud du Sahara, Douala, IPD, 1976
- Problématique de la modernisation de l'agriculture vivrière dans les Zapi de l'Est, Douala, IPD, 1979, by Dikoume and Cordeiro
- Socio-cultural constraints in communicating agricultural techniques and innovations to small farmers in the central province of Zambia (on-going study) by PAID/ESA
- The effect of social and cultural factors on the production and commercialization of food crops (financed by UNESCO), PAID/WA, Foday MacBaley, 1983
- Small farmers in Malawi, PAID/ESA, 1983
- Société paysanne et auto-développement, sociétés rurales et autopromotion paysanne en zones Soudano-Sahéliennes: cas du Yatenga au Burkina-Faso, IPD/AOS, 1985

SPC has an integrated work programme covering diverse activities such as food and materials, marine resources, rural management and technology, community services, socio-economic statistical services, education services, information services, regional consultations, awards and grants, as well as cultural conservation and exchange. (Integration of traditional practices and knowledge is encouraged. Women's programmes are promoted or organized). This integrated work programme is directly shaped by the evaluations and recommendations of Island countries themselves, and by the Secretariate. In order to be even more efficient, all requests to the SPC will in future be treated as a "package" to determine the impact of all factors involved.

RESEARCH

SAREC is not a research institute but a research funding agency; it supports research activities and institutes in developing countries in Africa (NIR, Botswana; INIT, Cape Verde; ESTC, Ethiopia; Eduardo Mondlane University in Maputo, Mozambique; SOMAC, Somalia; Tanzania; Zimbabwe), Asia (India; NARESA, ARTI, CISIR, Sri Lanka; SCST, Vietnam) and Latin America (Argentina; Uruguay; Cuba; Nicaragua). SAREC also supports regional research cooperation (e.g.: PASS - Programme for African Social Science Research: recipients are the African Association of Women for Research and Development and CODESKIA - Council for Development of Economic and Social Research in Africa, and "Strategies for the Future of Africa" all in Dakar, Senegal; the Latin American Programme (LAP) gives support to 4 regional research centres: CLACSO, Argentina; CSUSA and FLACSO, Costa Rica; CRIES; Panama; and 29 other centres). The research activities of these centres and institutions very often take into account the cultural dimension of development
